A "hurrah for Jerry" brought out "three cheers for Halliwell" nearly every time.

The EAGLE cannot tell a lie; the farmer was here yesterday; several thousand of him—and his wife and child.

England is talking about a Pacific cable from Vancouver to Australia. Unless they make that cable remarkably strong Australia is liable to drift away from the crown one of these dark nights.

Census Superintendent Porter, now in London, says the New York census, taken by the police of that city, is a screaming farce. Mr. Porter ought to refer this dispute to Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The Boston Herald wants to know what is to become of the polygamist wives in Utah under the new monogamic departure. Why not ship them to Quebec where there are not nearly enough wives to go around.

How do the self-respecting Democrats of this district like the idea of being led around by the nose by a set of self-constituted party bosses, and traded off like so many cattle, as the alleged district committee has undertaken to do by their Hutchinson faux pas?

The Universalists of New York in convention at Buffalo have passed a resolution "regretting the use of tobacco by clergymen in the fellowship." This leaves it optional with the persons to indulge in remote after a good smoke. It is just as well to hedge on this question.

The Republicans of Sedgewick county have a ticket in the field this year that every man can vote. Every man nominated is a good one and will make a good officer. Let all be elected and prove the old party of Sedgewick county is still able to wipe the ground with the opposition, even when it doubles teams on us.

The aptest transparency displayed in the procession yesterday was a representation of a cow being fed with corn by a lean man labeled "Kansas," while a jolly, fat fellow labeled "New York" sat comfortably on a stool with a full under the cow's udder catching the flow of milk. The "people" seem to be catching on.

Hon. Abram S. Hewitt, before the British Iron and Steel Institute, said that at the present rate of increase the world would consume in the year 1900 no less than 35,000,000 gross tons of iron, of which the United States must supply 45 percent. Mr. Hewitt predicted that in ten years this country would nearly double its production.

The phosphate mines of South Carolina afford more revenue to the state than ordinary gold mines. The royalty of $1 a ton on the rock removed from navigable streams, for the year just ended amounts to $237,100, or $25,000 more than last year's income, and the highest on record. The gypsum beds of Kansas will prove as valuable some day, and the day will not be removed far beyond the return of general prosperity to the state and country.

The political leaders of West Virginia, Democrats and Republicans, have united in an effort to carry out the rigid law of the state against the use of money in elections. This law forbids, under heavy penalties, any candidate from hiring men to work at the polls; from paying the expenses of delegates to conventions; from hiring any one to solicit votes, and, in short, from using money in any way except to pay the expenses of public speakers and the circulation of literature. About the only legitimate field left them at election times is to set 'em up for the boys.

The old scheme of organizing an institution to be known as the National Collection Bank of New York, with a capital of $1,000,000, and a net surplus of $100,000, is being revived by the daily press of that city. It is also reported that co-operative banks of the same character are now in process of organizing in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia. The proposed object of these banks is to make collections of checks drawn upon banks outside of the cities mentioned. It is estimated that the New York banks handle daily about $16,000,000 of country drafts and checks. We do not believe that active operations have yet begun for the consummation of this scheme. The financier says a national bank of collection may be organized in New York, but several years may be expected to elapse before such an institution becomes a reality.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

The subject of hot winds, their cause and the best methods for dissipating them, has been ably discussed by Mr. S. D. Huston, in a series of articles in these columns, the last one appearing yesterday. The origin and causes of these devastating visitations, as set forth by Mr. Huston, are generally accepted as the correct ones and are, in the main, unquestionably true. Mr. Huston's suggestions of the remedies to be employed to prevent or counteract the destructive effects of the hot winds, are also in the line of reason, and have been demonstrated as effective in a number of localities in this and other states where they have been tested.

The hot winds are caused by the absence of moisture in the ground and air, and any method that will supply this necessary element, that is water, will of necessity prevent the harmful condition from arising. This has been done in some localities, but generally in a small way, comparatively, because it is depended upon private efforts altogether.

As before stated enough has been done to demonstrate the effectiveness of supplying the necessary moisture by artificial means in the arid districts, and although it has been done in a small way its feasibility is made so apparent, that with proper effort, the government can undoubtedly be enlisted in the undertaking. This is the point of first and most vital interest to the people of the entire section of country that needs such beneficent assistance, and none more so than the Seventh congressional district of Kansas.

Irrigation is not wanted for the entire district, but the entire district wants it for those portions of it that do need it, and it is vitally interested in the successful application of that method where it is needed and where it can be employed to good and profitable advantage. How to secure the necessary aid from the government, then, becomes the initial question and it is easily answered, as far as it is possible to do it through personal effort. It is to send some one to congress who is in hearty sympathy with the cause, and who at the same time possesses the knowledge of the subject and the ability to intelligently present the question to the government.

Hon. James R. Halliwell, the Republican candidate for congress from this district is such a one, possessing as he does these qualifications to an eminent degree. Col. Halliwell has made this question one of special study and investigation and there is perhaps no man in the district more thoroughly posted as to the requirements of portions of this district in this direction and its capabilities under a comprehensive system of irrigation than he.

Being equipped by attainments and inclination to serve the district most efficiently in this particular direction, which is a most important and pressing one, it seems to us, as it must to every thinking intelligence, that it would be next to suicidal to the best interests of the district not to send such a man to represent it at this important time, when so much of progress and the development of the agricultural resources of the district—its latent wealth—depends upon the personal efforts of the representative in congress. It would be to discredit the intelligence of the mass of the voters of the district to suspect them of a lack of appreciation of these things or that they will fail to do what they can to secure them by electing Col. Jim Halliwell to congress.

THEORY VS. PRACTICE.

What great and useful institutions would labor unions be, if they carried out what Chalmers M. Depew declared as his objects, in his address before the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

"The fundamental idea of my brotherhood," he said, "is, first, charity in support of the sick and injured, and contributions to the families of the dead; second, education, which perfects the artisan in the theory and practice of his trade and broadens him for larger usefulness as a citizen; and third, protection in securing and maintaining your rights."

How few carry out such a commendable plan. Their charity consists in giving to those whom they command to quit work a sum equal to a small portion of what they could have earned by work, the education in narrowing their minds to believe that they alone have rights and the employers have none, and the protection of these rights in trying to infringe the rights of their employers.

A SICKLY JOB.

That was intended to be a very clever little coup, the performance of the Democratic congressional committee at Hutchinson Wednesday in proclaiming Jerry Simpson the Democratic candidate for congress for this district, but it was about the silliest, sickly performance we ever saw by men credited with even a moderate degree of common sense or political shrewdness. The only body authorized to do that, deliberately refused to, and its action was endorsed by four-fifths of the Democrats of the district.

And now, at this late day, for a coe of political tricksters to undertake to dictate to the rank and file of the party in so important a matter, and for their personal benefit, as is undoubtedly the case in this instance, is an open insult to the intelligence and manhood of the individual members of the party. No intelligent Democrat will be in any sense bound by such action, but scores and hundreds will unquestionably resent the insult by voting for Jim Halliwell.

WILL REWARD THE FAITHFUL.

A paper in Mr. Springer's district in Illinois cites the earnest efforts of that representative in congress in behalf of the opening of Oklahoma and other Indian lands to settlement as evidence of his faithfulness to the people's interest and as sufficient reason why he should receive the unanimous support of the people of his district regardless of party. Granting the force of the argument as far as it goes, it applies with equal force in favor of Hon. B. W. Perkins, of the Third district of this state. It is known and admitted by everybody that Mr. Perkins did as much or more hard work in the cause referred to than any other member of congress. Kansas has in some ways been the greatest beneficiary of the opening of the Indian lands, including Oklahoma, of any other state, and Mr. Perkins' district has received the largest share of these benefits. If, therefore, the circumstances referred to are to be used to the credit of a man in a distant state, how much more forceful they become in favor of the real champion of the cause in question.

But this is but one instance wherein Mr. Perkins has manifested a willingness, not only in an earnest desire to serve the best interests of his constituency and the state as he understands them. The eight years he has served the Third district have been filled with earnest, painstaking endeavor to further the material concerns of the people. The voters of the Third district are not lacking in appreciation of the labors in their behalf of their faithful and efficient representative as to be led off after a jack-with-a-lantern in a vain search for the unattainable, as Lucien Baker would remark, not much, Mary Ann.

When away from Wichita Jerry Simpson denounces the city as a seething mass of rottenness and corruption—nothing is too vile to apply to it. But when he has occasion to visit the city he is all smiles and snipers, and his efforts while here are to coddle and cajole and dispense caramels of speech. It won't work, Jerry. The Princess is not to be duped by your nauseating attempts at flattery.

WORTHY AND WELL QUALIFIED.

To the Editor of the Eagle.

Col. J. R. Halliwell is truly worthy of the position of congressman of the Big Seventh district. He is a good lawyer, a man of mature judgment and superior business qualifications, and besides, he is an old soldier, and wears the title of "colonel" which he won, as his record as a soldier shows. He is also always accessible to the humblest citizen. His political sagacity pointed him out as the man to take charge of the people's interests, which he will handle with such skill that the voters of the Seventh congressional district will never have any reason to regret his election. His unbending honesty in public and private matters will secure for him, from beginning to end, a high standing in the halls of congress.

In politics he enjoys the full confidence of his party, all over where he is known. He also handles the issues of the day with such dexterity that all who have had the pleasure of hearing him are thoroughly convinced that he is the model man for us to support, and will undoubtedly receive the united vote of every true, loyal voter in the Big Seventh district, on November 4, 1890.

SILVER PROSPECTS.

From the Journal of Finance.

It may be several months before the value of silver will reach a settled basis. The remarkable rise, due to the purchases of the government, which was succeeded by a fall quite as remarkable, indicates the presence in the market of influences ready to create an abnormal demand for the white metal whenever the assistance of the government can be enlisted in their behalf. It is to be seen whether the same experiment will be repeated in the few months following. If it is, it is not unlikely that the price will fluctuate as before, and repeat the experience. One experience, however, may prove sufficient, and in that event the market will be settled and will not be great. Having measured the demand, it is possible that the market is better prepared to meet it this month than last, and this fact will also prove a conservative agent.

The price of silver is doubtless established in the London market. The restriction of our tariffs, the downfall of our international shipping and the exclusiveness which our legislators have shown in our dealings with silver-using countries have prevented us from securing a market for our silver. The business world, who do with South America whose republics largely use this metal as coin, is largely done through England and English bankers, while that of Europe is also done through the same agencies. In addition to this, silver is constantly flowing into the London market from India, Asia and Africa—to all of which sections require and use large amounts. While it is impossible in the present state of statistical information to obtain reliable data as to the amounts yearly exported to the nations of the east, enough is known to warrant the assumption that there can be no stable variation in the price of this commodity in the London market for some time to come, and that the increased production of the present is ample to meet the requirements of India, China and other silver-using countries.

So long as London remains the centre of the strong influences which make the price of silver, and until some means are devised for more direct and vastly larger exchanges between our own country and South America, there is little hope that any aid which silver may receive from the legislation of congress will avail to increase its demand or value. A market, which receives practically the whole of the production of the world, outside the silver produced in the United States, and distributes it to the utmost parts, must fix the price and give to it a stability that cannot be shaken for more than a few days at a time by speculative efforts at this point.

Senator Teller of Colorado is correct in attributing the fluctuations in the market to the speculators, but he has fallen into the trifling error of placing the speculators on the wrong side of the fence.

There is, however, a prospect for silver. It is still in its infancy. It will be a child of slow growth. Our present section is rapidly developing and will need it more and more. Our international relations with South America are becoming closer and this will greatly enlarge the demand. England, France and Germany are pushing great enterprises in the wide travelled east, opening up new and immense markets, subduing barbarism with commerce and here, too, will be a market that in years to come will tax the production of silver to the utmost capacity. With our eastern coast in close contact with the centres of commerce, and our western shores within convenient communication with the markets of Asia, the mountains of the west will yet be called upon to yield up a harvest of coin far beyond their present power.

The coyotes come into Beaver City at night and sing anthems. The inhabitants suffer almost as much as the anthems.

SUNFLOWER SHIMMER.

The youngest thing about Lew Hanback is his voice.

Even Jay Gould is not popular in Kansas this year.

What a relief it would be if men would voluntarily register.

"McKinley" is a new word. Senator Plumb doesn't use it.

The portraits of Ingalls in newspapers all make his face too fat.

Ben Glover has a fence burning record, but Perkins is fire-proof.

Did anybody ever call George T. Anthony "a grand old man?"

Senator Ingalls calls the calamity howlers "the Apostles of despair."

Prospective enure ought to poll a big vote in Leavenworth next month.

This time next month the politician will have crept in his hole—that is the unsuccessful politician.

Mrs. Lease and Senator Ingalls are just about the same weight, when Mrs. Lease's lungs are expanded.

Governor Humphrey speaks with his hands in his pockets and uses "devilish" freely in his addresses.

Nobody ever thinks of offering three cheers for Jerry Simpson and the Stars and Stripes in the same breath.

The powerful point in an Alliance proposition is not the parade of the farm products, but of the farm producers.

If the McKinley bill has increased the price of everything in the country, it is but right that Kansas raise its voice.

As public as some men dare to become is to sit out on the platform and to drink out of the same glass of water with the orators.

The Atchison Champion has sat on a Republican candidate for the legislature named Seaton, because he is an Ingalls man.

Noble Prentiss is on the Atlantic coast. He is the only one in Kansas who chooses his vacation during political campaigns.

It is a mistake to take a newspaper man, no matter what the provocation. Casius Gaus Foster could have told Governor Humphrey that.

The Atchison Globe's notorious citizen of Atchison who "doesn't think Ingalls amounts to anything" has been discovered. He is the editor of the Champion.

The Emporia Republican officially announces that Joseph Puffer's name has only two "f's." The pure German would be "Pfeffer." However, the EAGLE can handle the amendment with equal "e's."

George Martin says "keep your eye on the American flag and vote the Republican ticket."

If George Martin lived further out in Kansas, he would discover that most American flags this year float over Alliance parades and picnics.

Burdett spoke with Governor Humphrey at South Center, Tuesday night. A week ago he said that he was done with the whole outfit because of the governor's action in the Leavenworth affair. What a poor state Kansas would be if it depended on consistency for jewels.

"Senator Ingalls at Winfield: 'We are the greatest, the richest and most powerful nation on earth, but one-half of the aggregate wealth of the nation is owned and controlled by less than 300,000 men. The 'father of our country' was the richest elsewhere here been chronicled almost every day, and all the while an active and urgent call for money existed at home. Advances from Paris indicate a tightening of money all over the continent. The French rate of discount will probably remain as it is unless future developments positively remain here and the Bank of France has taken other and effective measures to prevent the shipment of gold from her shores. Several months ago, we mentioned the desperate condition of Spanish finances. The passage of days and months has seen the situation in the district. Spain has in the past depended altogether upon the Bank of Spain for succor in time of tribulation, but the bank is now in such condition as to render aid from that quarter impossible for the present, at least. Spain has only herself to rely on for the existing emergency. The reckless issue of paper currency, with nothing whatever behind it, can have but one result.

A rumor is in circulation to the effect that European capitalists have secured nearly all the $250,000 shares of the National Bank of Mexico, and the rumor further states that efforts will be made to so modify the charter that foreigners would be permitted to sit on the board of administration. The capital of the Bank of Mexico is $25,000,000, but only a third of that amount is paid in. The annual dividend is 14 per cent, and the shares are quoted at $125 in gold. Among those said to be interested in the purchasing syndicate are men whose reputation as financiers is international. Money in Mexico is at present easier than it is anywhere else in the world. If it were not for the Bank of Mexico, the money market would be a chaos. The Bank of Mexico has established a very successful precedent for that sort of thing.

THE NEGRO JUBILEE.

From the Kansas City Star.

The twenty-eighth anniversary of the emancipation proclamation of President Lincoln was celebrated during last week by the colored people in all sections of the country. The event is duly signified every year by the freedmen, and it is not likely that they are finally driven from the pulpit, degrading and misleading the people on the stage misrepresenting life in the courts abetting and encouraging wrong-doing; in legislatures enacting unjust and oppressive laws; and in the press and on the platform obscuring the truth, and promulgating error.

Lies misstate men and women, and where, of all places, peace and bliss should dwell there is discord, strife and sorrow.

As darkness is light, and death to life, so is a lie to the truth. That lies are the cause of all the crime, anguish and poverty existing in the world is no new statement of fact, but there may be much that is new in a realization of the extent to which it is true. Beware of lies.

And now the soldier boys are demoralized over the news that the order transferring them to Fort Riley has been reconsidered and that they will be sent to Fort Leavenworth.
